DESCRIPTION: Tanya Morose, Government and Municipal Consultant, Municipal and Public Safety - Public Services Health & Safety Association.

The Occupational Health and Safety Act makes enormous demands on Employers. If your employer does not have a full time safety person, you may add to your value in the employer's eyes by being well aware of the main duties your employer has and helping to carry them out. If you are a supervisor, you have many duties under the Act also.

BIOGRAPHY: Ms. Tanya Morose, Government and Municipal Consultant
Ergonomist and occupational health and safety consultant with over 15 years experience in a variety of settings.

My primary objective is to work with employers and workers to develop sustainable and robust occupational health and safety programs to mitigate risk. As an ergonomist, I enjoy conducting proactive design reviews to address ergonomics issues prior to the construction of workstations, to assess existing workstations to identify cost effective corrective actions to minimize risk, and if needed, work with employers and injured workers to assess the fit between a worker's abilities and job demands to facilitate early and safe return-to-work.

Dynamic Facilitator - customize and facilitate training for clients and Certified Professional Ergonomist (CCPE), Canadian Registered Safety Professional (CRSP) candidate.
